Charlie Chung's oplum den on South Lawrence avenue looks like a cyclone had struck it. Its master and mistress have folded their tents and have gone to Wellington, where, doubtless, they will resume business.

Charlie Chung, after Daisy licked him, grew very rath and swore all kinds of oaths that he would have the life of the famous street sprinkler. Daisy fel. no alarm, although he had a kind of a creeping feeling that Charlie Chung was a highbinder. Night before last, when Mr. Dalsy was passing the launlady typewriters, copyists and clerks and substitute them with young men. This threw two young ladies in this agency out of nice positions and now their places are filled by two pale-factory of their voice for him to come into make their shop. Mr. Daisey thought the had a trap laid to assassinate him, bu everybody knows that Mr. Daisey is no craven, and he accepted thier invitan, at the same time picking out : spot on which to hit them with his good right arm if they attempted to play any other way than absolutely square with him. Instead of assassinating him they fairly hugged and kissed him and with tearful gratitude thanked him for smashing their fellow-countryman. agencies for the company or travel in

The fact is, Charlie Chung had all the ther Chinamen in town buffaloed. He had the reputation of being a highbinder and they were afraid as death of him. One of the two wanted Dalsey to kill Charlie Chung, at the same time promising to pay his fine for doing so. Thi talk of the Chinamen, with other hints dropped, made Chief Burt believe that Charlie Chung was not the Chinaman he ought to be. Just about this time a very fortunate event occurred, if such a thing could, with propriety, be so called. Mrs. Charlie Chung is a white wo-man, and a little beauty. Monday night she and some other woman got drunk and fell into the arms of a policeman, who gave them lodings in the city fall. Chief Burt began to examine them, as is the custom with chiefs, and Mrs. Charlie Chung promised that if he would let her out of jail she would tell him a whole lot of things. It is said that she told Chisf Burt enough to warrant him in the belief that Charlie Chung was not only a terror in his sphere, but that he even threatened to ill Frank Burt the first chance he got for robbing him of his opium pipe. This aroused Chief Burt and he went to make a thorough investigation of the oplum den, where found about twenty instruments of death hidden away. There were four sharp knives, a pistol, three dirk-knvess, two stillettos, one slung-shots, one billy, one gag for the mouth, a Chinese cleaver, several toys filled with opium, four epium pipes and a number of other things that go with an opium den and a highbinding outfit.

All hese things were captured by the chief and taken to police headquarters, where they adora the curiosity case in the chief's room. Mrs. Charlie Chung was at once ordered to pull out after he husband with a perpetual injunction preventing either her or Charlie from coming back at the risk of having the head of the family strung from the cross beam of a telegraph pole. She obeyed. Both are now in Wellington, but it is doubtful if the good people of that town will allow them to stay there. It is probably that they will finally dra, where they can d business unnoticed while the capital city is busy looking after the morals of the other cities of the state.
